RESORTS TO BURGLARY IN QUEST FOR $24 TO MAKE UP TUITION FEE

Vermilion, S. D., Feb. 5 (A.P.).—Need of $24 to pay her tuition for the second semester at the University of South Dakota prompted a 19-year-old co-ed to turn burglar early today. Her venture terminated in arrest.

Equipped with the paraphernalia of the craft of the bank robber, Miss Marion Meyers, a freshman, forced entry to the First National Bank here but she was interrupted before she could attack the vault with an electric drill.

Approach of a night watchman sent her scampering away just as she prepared to use the drill, and in her flight she left a hat bearing her name.

Her arrest resulted, however, when she returned a few minutes later, apparently for her tools, and

2 FACE JAIL IN 'SALE' OF PRESIDENTIAL JOBS

By JAMES T. WILLIAMS, JR.

Washington, Feb. 5.—Two members of the Republican national committee may be sent to jail unless their allies in that powerful organization drum up enough votes in the Senate to defeat the resolution just reported from the Committee on the Judiciary by the chairman, Senator Norris of Nebraska, to probe the traffic in presidential commissions, which the evidence seems to show is "a highly protected industry" in the South today.

The Norris resolution numbers among its supporters Senator Borah of Idaho, Senator Reed of Missouri, Senator Walsh of Montana, Senator Overman of North Carolina and Senator Ashurst of Arizona.

Opposing this group of independent Republicans and indignant Democrats are Senator Ernst of Kentucky, the member from that State of the Republican National Committee, and Senator Gillett of Massachusetts whose former colleague, ex-Senator Butler, retains the chairmanship of the national committee of his party in spite of his defeat for election last November by Senator Walsh of Massachusetts.

It is not doubted by some of the supporters of the Norris resolution that the Republican National Committee will be tempted to resort to its notorious "steam roller" methods to flatten out support in the Senate for a real investigation of the Hollywood, Cal., Feb. 5.—Jack Gilbert and Greta Garbo "eloped" to Santa Anna to be married a short time ago only to be halted at the altar by the chill, though beautiful, actress' exercise of the woman's prerogative—she changed her mind at the last minute—it became known today.

The change of mind might have been due in part to the fact that Mauritz Stiller, the Swedish director who followed the blonde star to Fitchburg, Feb. 5.—Crazed by a week of heavy drinking, Edward F. Murphy, World War veteran, twice decorated for bravery, attempted to kill his whole family early today by flooding his home in Appleton Circle with illuminating gas.

GALLIVAN AIDS QUINCY MOTHER IN ROMANTIC BATTLE FOR HEIRESS

Fighting to regain her child, alleged to have been kidnaped by relatives, a Quincy mother today enlisted the aid of Congressman James A. Gallivan who declared that he would seek to bring into action every resource of the United States government to gain her a fair hearing on her claim.

War, love, romance, wealth enter into the entrancing story of the young Quincy mother and her daughter, and to these is now added the question of international rights and courtesies.

The child, Lucienne Nolan, eight years old, is an heiress to $200,000. Her father's relatives have her at a private school in Switzerland, and international boundary lines block every attempt of tre mother, Mrs. Lucienne Bond of Wollaston, to establish herself as legal guardian.

B. & M. AND N. H. IN ON 5 MILLION WAGE RAISE

New York, Feb. 5 (A.P.)—A 7½ per cent. wage increase was granted today to 31,000 firemen and engineers on 59 railroads in the East, when the trainmen and operators settled demands before G. W. Hangar of the United States Board of Mediation.

The original demands of the employes was for an increase of $1 a day and up, involving $13,000,000. The agreement reached today will involve an outlay of $5,000,000.

The settlement was reached under provisions of the Watson-Parker bill and is said to be the first case of this magnitude to be settled by mediation. The agreement lasts for one year and may be terminated by either side then.

The agreement affects 27 large roads and 32 subsidiaries east of Chicago and north of the Ohio river. Among the larger railroads are the New York Central, Pennsylvania, Baltimore & Ohio, Boston & Maine and the New York, New Haven & Hartford.

Certain minor working conditions demands of the men were granted and some of their requesets were refused.

Nearly 900 Boston & Maine firemen will benefit by the wage increase granted today but the percentage will fluctuate in certain cases according to officials of the road.

Get out the well known snow shovel and the overshoes for it's going to snow tonight.

At least, that is what Uncle Sam's weather man says Old Man Winter has selected from his pack of New England varieties. He also verified the cheerful discovery of thousands of New Englanders that the severe cold snap of the last 48 hours is over and that the mercury is climbing.

Nevertheless it was among the coldest mornings of the winter, with a mark of 11 above zero in Boston, and 14 below at Northfield, Vt., and Greenville, Me. From 5 a.m. to 8 a.m. the mercury at the Weather Bureau stuck to 11 above as if undecided whether to drop or rise. It took the latter course and began to climb steadily.

Its toboggan slide of 31 degrees since 1 a. m. the day before was enough of a chill, and the rise in temperature was given a sort of a glad hand. The jump is said to be due to a storm with its centre in eastern Iowa, which is moving rapidly eastward. It has reached western New York and the first flakes are due to hit Boston by tonight.

ALL KINDS of substances, of brains, of wealth. You can buy pig iron for less than $20 a ton, and make it into watch springs, worth millions of dollars a ton.

So with the thinking of man.

The government's tax suit in Washington brings out a statement that the real asset of Henry Ford's Company was "Henry Ford's genius." His brain, which might not fill a quart measure, has deep convolutions representing an industrial genius that has changed millions of tons of iron ore into a two-billion-dollar fortune.

It all depends on a DIFFERENCE in the brain that shows in the face.

HENRY FORD met John D. Rockefeller just once. He was driving through Florida in a car borrowed from Firestone, the rubber man.

"I told the chauffeur," says Mr. Ford, "to get his car washed, had the dust brushed off my coat and shoes, then walked over to Mr. Rockefeller's house. Letting me in without asking my name, they said, "Mr. Rockefeller is playing golf and will be here at twelve minutes past twelve." He was there to the minute and I walked with him. and it is not her money that Mrs. Bond seeks. She says:

"Heart-ties are more than money. Love is greater than gold."

Congressman Gallivan was called in by Mrs. Bond's attorney, former Assistant District Attorney Thomas D. Lavelle, who charges that the officials of a great bank are allied with the child's paternal relatives in preventing the mother gaining custody.

DECREE REVOKED.

A decree of guardianship, made in Probate Court at Dedham last April, was revoked, at the request of these officials, because they proved that the child was outside the limits of the United States, declares Attorney Lavelle.

"I will see Secretary of State Kellogg and if necessary we will interest the American minister to Switzerland in this case, for the mother has the right to a hearing of her case even if she has to go to Switzerland to get it," said Congressman Gallivan, after a conference today with Lavelle.

"No court in the world will deny Mrs. Bond her claim, and the child is being kept from her by legal maneuvering," said Lavelle.

The money which Lucienne Nolan will inherit was left in trust with a Hartford, Ct., bank by her grandfather, John H. Nolan. He made his fortune in insurance and left it to four children, of which Lucienne's father, now dead, was one.

"I am a French girl, my name was Lucienne Anne Rimbert and I lived in Paris," said Mrs. Bond. "During war days in Red Cross work I met Harry Nolan, who was in the field ambulance service. After a romance of a few months he asked me to marry him and I did, in Paris, Jan. 12, 1917.

"We set up a little home there and he was with me whenever he could get furloughs. Our daughter, Lucienne, was born August 10, 1918, in Paris. But my husband had become [illegible], then cruel, to me and a year after Lucienne was born I could stand it no longer. I got a divorce for cruel and abusive treatment and the Paris court gave me custody of Lucienne.

TOOK CHILD AWAY.

"But after the war was over, Harry Nolan, having money at his command, took my child away one day when he came to see her. He took Lucienne to Switzerland and the next I heard she had been moved to Los Angeles.

"I married William Bond, who had also been in the field ambulance service in Paris in 1920 and that same year we came to Boston. By correspondence I at last arranged to see my former husband and my child in New York, but while I was trying to gain custody there he took her away to Switzerland again.

"Then, he died. In his will he named me as his choice of guardian, as the Paris court had done long before. But I have never been able to get Lucienne back to this country and I believe my former husband's sisters, one of whom lives in Bavaria, is acting as her guardian, though without any right."

In the event of the death of Lucienne, according to her father's will, her share of the grandfather's vast fortune would be distributed among two aunts and an uncle, Mrs. Alice St. John Nolan Hunt of New York, also Mrs. Emily Nolan Frieth of [illegible], Traunst, Bavaria; Julian St. John Nolan of Los Angeles.

was found crying seated on a stairway in the rear of the building.

Taken to the jail, the young woman told State's Attorney H. O. Perkins that she needed $24 for tuition and "didn't know any other way to get it."

Miss Meyers, who is 19 or 20 years old, is from Valley City, N. D.

Her mother lives at Woonsocket, S. D., she said, but her father is dead. Here she has lived at the home of Professor C. C. Josey, teacher of philosophy, where she worked for her board.

Recently an electric drill and some other tools were stolen from a metal concern, and these were used by Miss Meyers in forcing an entry to the bank. She entered the building by smashing a rear window, and then broke through a heavy cage door leading to the vault.

Telegraph wires had been cut in the alley back of the bank and the young woman also clipped the telephone wires after she entered the building.

"For heaven's sake, don't tell my mother; it would break her heart," she sobbed to State's Attorney Perkins in jail.

"I won't," he replied, "if you tell me the names of your accomplices." He does not think a girl could have broken through the vault unaided.

But Miss Meyers only cried the harder, reiterating that she was alone.

Meanwhile Mrs. Meyers was notified by telephone and replied brokenly: "That wasn't my girl; my girl wouldn't do anything like that."

Called from work in a Woonsocket cafe, the woman was greatly affected. She has a son ill, in a Huron, S. D., hospital.

State's Attorney Perkins declared the girl "had been reading about that Texas university girl who held up a 'bank,'" and he expressed the belief "this suggested the bank robbery to Miss Meyers."

today, and his wife remonstrated with him for his drinking. Finally she went upstairs where their four children, ranging in age from four to ten years old were sleeping. Mrs. Murphy's mother was also sleeping upstairs.

Before she left the kitchen Mrs Murphy had seen her husband throw himself on a couch. Some time later the odor of gas awakened her.

Hastily throwing open all the windows, Mrs. Murphy went to the kitchen, and found that her husband had opened the four gas jets in the stove. He himself was all but unconscious.

But he had strength enough to grapple with her, crying out as they struggled: "I am going to kill myself and the whole family, and nobody's going to stop me."

Finally Mrs. Murphy subdued her husband long enough to telephone the police and Patrolmen Hart and Bowen answered the call and locked him up in the police station where he made a noose of his belt and tried to end his life, but was cut down and revived.

BRILLIANT OPENING

Jack, all smiles and happiness, escorted the tall, slumberous-eyed Greta to last night's brilliant opening of "Flesh and The Devil" at the Forum theatre. The hatchet between these two has evidently been buried and the romance that halted so abruptly when Jack departed from the coast to forget in New York a month ago in despair of ever winning the Swedish beauty, sizzling again.

There is no question but Mr. Gilbert was happy with Miss Garbo. His eyes, brown eyes that can snap and flame, melted in proud content —believe it or not. Greta, as usual, interestingly disinterested in what went on around her.

When the stars of "Flesh and the Devil" alighted from their machine in front of the theatre a battery of lights played upon them and the enormous crowd canyoning the entrance to the doors shouted welcome and pushed forward eagerly.

Jack smiled and chuckled, but Miss Garbo registered no activeness at all. She appeared like one in a hypnotic trance, her habitual external shell, it seems.

'Married a Month,' Says Star on Arrival With Parado at Los Angeles

Los Angeles, Feb. 5.—This time Eva Tanguay, noted comedienne, does care, she admitted as she stepped off a train here with Allan Parado, her 25-year-old Hungarian pianist husband.

The couple intimated that their marriage was not generally known, though the engagement was announced some time ago.

"We've been married a month," Miss Tanguay said, but she refused to tell where. She also refused to tell her age, which is reported to be more than double that of her husband. The couple are here for a vacation before touring Europe.

The "I Don't Care Girl" is widely known in Boston, and in the western part of the State Eva had become a character long before vaudeville had made her a national figure.

Around Holyoke she frequently was seen in her pony cart, exchanging epigrams with everybody who spoke to her, and rarely coming off second best in the exchange of repartee.

Her "I Don't Care" song, and the bizarre costumes in which she leaped, pranced and danced about the stage of the various vaudeville houses won her the position as vaudeville top-liner.

Her last Boston appearance was at the Bowdoin Square Theatre, where a rather heavier Eva showed that she had lost none of her personality and pep, though she had taken on a little more avoirdupois with the years.

STATE RESTS IN MURDER TRIAL OF WINTERS

Woodstock, Vt., Feb. 5.—The prosecution rested today at the conclusion of the testimony of Police Chief Michael Degnan of Windsor in the trial of John C. Winters, charged with the murder of Cecelia Gullivan, of Whitman, Mass., treasurer of the Cone Automatic Machine Co.

Special Prosecutor Raymond Trainor, in announcing he had finished, said he was informed the defence would recall Mrs. Bessie Pandjiris Monday for further cross-examination before opening its case.

Mrs. Pandjiris is the woman who the State charges, was attacked by Winters in the home of "Tottie" Evarts a few hours before Miss Gullivan was murdered.

Chief Degnan was rigidly cross-questioned today on his testimony regarding the discovery of burdock burrs on Winters' clothing. One of the strong points in the State's case is the discovery of burdock burrs in the bedroom of the murdered woman and on the night clothing of Mrs. Bessie Pandjiris, who was attacked by Winters, the State claims, in the home of "Tottie" Evarts shortly before the murder.

The first witness today was Neil Murphy, who told of meeting Winters Sunday, November 7.

"They have a good description of the man who attacked Mrs. Pandjiris; better look out, Jack, it fits you pretty close," Murphy testified he told Winters for the purpose of "kidding" him.

Winters took the remark so seriously that he walked away, the witness said.

QUIZ 'MYSTERY MAN' IN DEATH

Police today subjected a West Roxbury young man to a long period of questioning at West Roxbury police station in their search for clues in the murder of Maybelle Matheson.

Contrary to a custom heretofore followed during investigation, all policemen and inspectors, except two questioners, Captain James P. Smith and Inspector Harry Pierce of the homicide squad, were excluded from the "interview room."

When the young man arrived at the police station, Murdock Matheson, cousin of Maybelle, was in conference with policemen, having returned of his own accord to give any further help that he could in tracing her acquaintances.

With the arrival of the West Roxbury boy, Murdock Matheson was also forced to leave the conference room and wait around the police station until the questioning, upon which the police seemed to place importance, was ended.

DEATH PENALTY ASSAILED BY HENRY FORD

Detroit, Feb. 5 (A.P.)—Capital punishment is as fundamentally wrong as a cure for crime as charity is a cure for poverty, in the opinion of Henry Ford. Mr. Ford made this statement today in expressing unqualified opposition to capital punishment.

Several capital punishment proposals now are before the Michigan State Legislature.

"The same people—ministers and editors—who listened to the war propaganda of financiers, ten years ago, teaching the doctrine of killing, are now rooting for capital punishment," Mr. Ford said.

"It is wrong to kill a man, everybody agrees to that. It does no good to the man, it does no good to society. Capital punishment is as fundamentally wrong as a cure for crime as charity is as a cure for poverty.

"If the finances of the country were properly adjusted there would be plenty of work for these boys who are committing crime, and it is my opinion that every one of them would work if there was work to do.

"But we kill—we want to kill—the criminal because it is the easiest way of disposing of the problem. We are taking hold of both problems by the wrong handle. I wouldn't mind giving a man a beating, but I wouldn't want to kill him, and I don't see how anybody can vote for capital punishment unless he himself is willing to be the executioner.

"I see more capital punishment is not a deterrent for crime. Any man who has reached the point where he will kill another does not care whether he himself gets killed.

"The issue to me is to get at the root of the problem and that takes us right to the door of the financiers who are chargeable for the thousands of idle men and who are at the same time deliberately trying to harden the hearts of the people in their attitude toward human life."

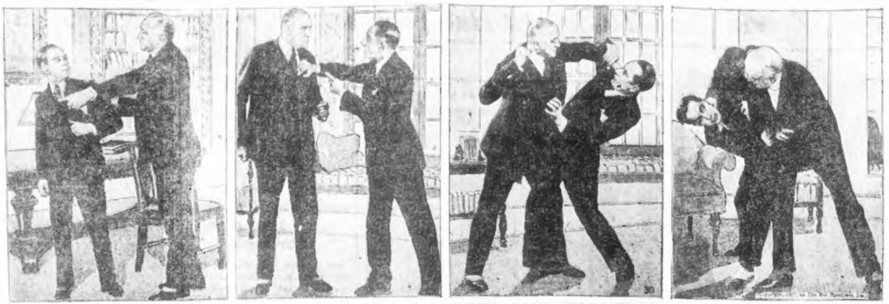
'Guilty' ∾ Alton's Attack ∾ By Jean McDonough



"'"AND NOW THAT YOU KNOW I'm not going to lend you the money,' Alton shouted. 'I want you to leave this house immediately. You're a crook—a low down wastrel—and you'd be completely ostracized if it weren't for the prestige of your name. You're the black sheep of the Dorland family and if you were my son I'd have you put away.' Every word out of his mouth was an insult. I could stand it no longer. My anger rose to a point where I didn't care whether or not I got the money.

"'"ALTON, IF I'M A CROOK—what are you?' I shouted back. 'I know how you got your money and everyone else does, too. You're a thief who works within the law. I have only to whisper a few things about town and you know what would happen to you.'"" Charles stopped his story there. "Doris," he said, "It's hard for me to tell you these things but it is necessary if you are to understand the insane anger of this man. Do you want me to continue?" "I understand," I said, "please go on."

"'WHEN I SAID THAT I MIGHT whisper a few things about town,' Dorland continued, 'Alton scented blackmail. He jumped at my throat. "I didn't think you'd come down that low, Dorland," he shouted. "Well, you won't try to stoop to blackmail any more, after I get through with you." I felt his long fingers close tightly around my throat. He had caught me unawares. I wasn't able to defend myself properly.

"'ALTON HAD MISUNDERSTOOD my remark about whispering. I had meant to use it merely as a threat but he was afraid that I was going to blackmail him. I hadn't come there with intentions of fighting, but since he started I had to defend myself. I twisted and squirmed, trying to release myself from his vise-like grip. But he was strong. My eyes bulged and my breath came in short, heavy gasps, and still he didn't let up. I felt that I wouldn't leave that house alive unless I did something quickly.'" (Continued Monday.)

3 DIE AS REV. STOCKDALE'S CHURCH BURNS

The dead are: Clyde Witt and his wife, Kate, caretakers of the church and Mrs. Mary Fitzgerald, assistant caretaker. Their bodies were burned almost beyond recognition. The explosion resulted from gas.

charges on which the Norris resolution is based.

For their part supporters of the Norris resolution will do their best to convince the Senate and the country that they are in earnest in their resolve to right a grave wrong. As a member of the Senate said, "Here is a flagrant scandal that is not only a disgrace to the government but a humiliation to the nation."

If the Senate can muster the courage to defy the Republican national committee, a subcommittee will be ordered to make the most thorough investigation of which the Senate is capable of all charges involving the sale of presidential commissions either for cash or campaign contributions.

To protect witnesses summoned by the Committee on the Judiciary to testify, the Executive will probably be asked to give public assurance that no office holder will be allowed to suffer at the hands of the Republican national committee because of any honest testimony given to the Senate's investigators. This would enable many office holders to assist the committee in its investigation without fear of punishment.

QUINCY LAUNCHES BOAT FOR OLDEST U. S. FERRY

By Associated Press.

The newest addition to the service of the oldest ferry in the United States slipped down the ways of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation's plant at Quincy today and was christened "Governor Carr" in honor of the founder of the company.

Back in 1675, Caleb Carr, afterward governor of the colony of Rhode Island, put into operation the first ferry between Newport and Jamestown, R. I. Twenty years later he was granted a license by the colony and with the exception of a brief period during the revolution it has been in continuous existence during the 250 years that have intervened.

The ferry remained the property of the Carr family through seven generations until 18[illegible] when the Jamestown and Newport Ferry Company was organized. George C. Carr formed the company and was its president for 23 years and the family never since has been without representation among its officials.

George Caleb Carr, present treasurer, has held office [illegible] years and his seven-year-old daughter, Lucy, who christened the boat today is a granddaughter of Thomas H. Carr, a former president.

A large number of members of the family as well as a delegation of citizens from Jamestown were present at the launching.

JOHN D.'S SON RICHER THAN H. FORD

Washington, Feb. 5 (Universal)—Government experts today disputed the claim that Henry Ford is "the richest man in the world."

They award the palm to John D. Rockefeller, Jr., as "probably the only individual billionaire."

Officials who make statistics a science, penetrating the secrets that rich men and the government guard jealously, cited these factors to support the Rockefeller claim:

The bulk of the vast fortune the elder Rockefeller conjured out of oil has been transferred to his son. Federal and State inheritance taxes, likely to total 25 to 50 per cent, when John D. Sr. dies, were a principal reason for this.

CONSTANTLY GROWING.

Rockefeller's is one of the first of the world's great fortunes kept constantly growing through "scientific management," despite great philanthropies.

The personal fortune of Henry Ford, regarded as the largest in the Ford family, would have to be reduced by the 40 per cent. estimated to be vested in Edsel Ford.

Much of the $400,000,000 Ford bank balances belongs to the Ford Motor Company and part of this would go with the property in any "billion dollar sale."

RICHER THAN BOTH FORDS.

A large part of the railroad, mine and other holdings likewise would go with that company, since they would be indispensable to the smooth and efficient operation that primarily give the enterprise its enormous value.

On this basis belief was expressed that the Ford wealth would not exceed the younger Rockefeller's even if Edsel's funds were counted with the resources of Henry Ford.

Expert analysis of tax payments has indicated that Rockefeller's wealth is the larger.

Patrolman Edward Dunn was whistling despite the chill as he patroled Everett square today, and he was amazed when a pair of cold muzzles were pressed against his coat and four big eyes looked up at him inquiringly.

Two stray horses had ambled up to Patrolman Dunn, believing that he was paging them as he was whistling that inane ditty which runs, "Horses, horses, horses," and so on.

One was a white horse, the other a roan, and both looked as though it had been a tough night. Patrolman Dunn put them under arrest on the charge of being vagabonds and they were locked up in the city stables.

'I'M NOT AFTER DIVORCE!' SAYS VANDERBILT

Havre, France, Feb. 5 (I.N.S.)—"This divorce thing is an old chestnut. It started fifteen years ago and I am tired of denying it," said William K. Vanderbilt when he disembarked from the S. S. France today and was told of recurring reports in New York that he had come to France to secure a divorce in order that he might marry Mrs. Rosamund Lancaster Warburton.

"My wife and I are not living together and haven't been for some time, but we are good friends," said Vanderbilt. "The story about an application having been made to the Rota Tribunal for an annulment of our marriage was untrue."

"I am not going to Paris to get a divorce. I am on my way to the South of France to see my mother, boarding my yacht within four days."

One New York newspaper had reported that Mrs. Warburton was also a passenger on the France. If she was she succeeded in completely hiding her identity, for her name did not appear on the passenger list and none of the passengers had seen her during the voyage.

Dudley Field Malone, who was also a passenger, denied that he had come to Paris to act as Vanderbilt's lawyer and said he was merely a friend of Vanderbilt and had come to Europe to arrange for a tour here for Gene Tunney.

U. S. DEMANDS PROTECTION IN SHANGHAI

Washington, Feb. 5 (I.N.S.)—Secretary of State Kellogg has instructed John V. A. MacMurray, American minister in Peking, to negotiate with rival Chinese military leaders for protection of the international settlement in Shanghai from military violence, the State Department announced today.

This government, however, is opposed to making Shanghai a neutral zone, it was stated, but no explanation was offered of this.

MacMurray conferred on the question today with Marshal Chang Tso Lin, Manchurian war lord.

A press dispatch from Peking says Marshal Chang voiced his official objection to the dispatching of foreign troops to Shanghai, but indicated that their presence pleased him personally as he calculated they would aid him in his fight against the Nationalist forces of Canton.

Meantime General Sun Chuan Fang is engaged in a desperate battle against the Cantonese south of Shanghai after what he is quoted as describing as a "strategic retreat" from Yenchow, where heavy losses were sustained.

More than 1,000 wounded of Fang's army have been received in Hanchow, north of the battlefront.

AMOSKEAG BANK IS GROWING

The Amoskeag Savings Bank of Manchester, H. H., housed in an impressive building, and rated among leading banks in and out of the state, is today filling a personal place in the success of thousands of Manchester and New Hampshire people who have for many years justly manifested a keen regard and a very great trust in the Amoskeag Savings Bank and its officers.

The officers of the bank are William Parker Straw, president; Albert O. Brown, former governor of the state, treasurer, and Harry L. Davis, assistant treasurer.

Fuelite Convenient

In this age of labor-saving convenience there has been no contribution of such practical utility as Fuelite liquefied gas condensed in steel containers, stored outside the buildings in neat cabinets, furnishing a strong, steady flow of gas into the burners of gas range, hot water, heater or other labor-saving appliance. To the surburban home or Summer camp not piped for ordinary gas, Fuelite is particularly adaptable. It is a purer more volatile gas giving out intense heat. It is safe to use, being free from carbon monoxide. It will not asphyxiate, has not the explosive danger invariably present in compressed high pressure gas, and is safe in every way.

The Manchester district is covered by the Fuelite Company at No. 21 Nashua street, Manchester. The general manager, Mr. N. W. Bangs has installed several hundred outfits in New Hampshire, that are rendering satisfaction equal to the best equipped homes in the congested cities. Literature can be had free by writing the Fuelite Company at Manchester. The company will be glad to send a representative upon request.

Merrimack Bank Helping Farmers

In the year 1884 the Merrimack River Savings Bank published a small pamphlet giving a brief history of the bank and told of the establishment of the bank in 1858. At the time it occupied a leading position not only in Manchester, but, as well, in the outlying sections. It is a splendid commentary upon principles of the bank and the character of its officers through the years, that the position of the bank today is a ranking one among New England banks, and that today, nearly three-quarters of a century after its birth, the Merrimack River Savings Bank can rightfully claim a major participation in the growth of Manchester and its neighboring farms and homes.

The bank's latest statement shows a fact which has been true on each of its statements namely, that a large majority of its loans are made on New Hampshire real estate, a large portion of which is to farm owners.

The officers of the bank are: Luther C. Baldwin, president; Arthur H. Hale, treasurer, and A. F. Emerson, assistant treasurer. The trustees are the above and George M. Clark, John C. Hayes and Arthur E. Moreau.

OLDEST SAVINGS BANK IN N. H.

The Manchester Savings Bank of Manchester, N. H., the oldest savings bank in the State, whose history for more than eighty years has been closely linked with the business and individual successes of New Hampshire, stands today in an envious position of well-grounded and well-founded success.

J. Brodie Smith, closely associated with building and business activities for many years, is the president of the Manchester Savings Bank; Walter M. Parker is treasurer, and the Board of Trustees includes in addition to these two officers, Leonard J. Farrell, J. Briggs Felton, John R. McLane and W. Byron Stearns.

GAS COMPANY SERVICE BEST

A community is known by its public utilities. Good lights, comfortable homes, abundant power, good telephone and transportation facilities tell a stranger more about the city than can the spoken word. The Manchester Gas Company recognizes only one standard in its relations with customers, whether it be in supplying gas or in selling gas appliances through which the gas is to be used. This standard is: What is best for the customer is best for the company.

With a new and modern plant and ample distribution facilities the Manchester Gas Company is in a position to render the best possible services to customers. Slightly over 100 miles of mains cover the city and make gas service available in practically every section. Each year extensions are made into new districts to take care of new developments.

PETRO OIL BURNER IS VERY POPULAR

This common unit will automatically give you all the heat that you want, hour after hour, month after month and year after year. It is a tireless comfort giver, cost reducer and relieves you or members of your household of the burdensome problem of "caring for the furnace."

With a Petro installation add another [illegible] to your house, which more than offset the cost of the installation. Your cellar as a [illegible] room, free from coal bins and ashes, where laundry can be hung [illegible] bad weather. Throughout your entire house you will be impressed by the lack of dust and dirt on your furniture, rugs and draperies.

The uniform, even temperature that the Petro Burner assures you has a decided affect upon the health of your family. There are no obnoxious odors, gases, drafts or changes in temperature such as are incident to the burning of coal. Your home is kept at an even temperature irrespective of the weather.

The ability of the Petro Burner to control automatically the amount of heat required is of the greatest economical importance. It effects a decided saving in fuel costs, inasmuch as no more fuel is used than necessary to give the required degree of heat.

G. E. Marston, 213 Hanover street, Manchester, is the authorized Petro dealer in the Manchester District. He has made many installations during the past year in private homes and large buildings which have proven highly satisfactory to the owners. The new Rice Varick Hotel in Manchester has a Petro installation by G. E. Marston.

KEENE, NEW HAMPSHIRE

By GLENROY W. SCOTT

One would have to spend but a few years in Keene to be convinced that it is one of New Hampshire's most progressive cities. While Keene is one of the oldest cities in the State and has long been noted for the solidity of its business interests and the beauty of its [illegible] of its residents, it [illegible] new life in the last [illegible]. This is evidenced by the [illegible] during this period more than a score of small factories have been added to its industrial list, bringing [illegible] added to its population and approximately $1,000,000 to its assessed valuation. The larger part of this progress has been directly due to the efficient work of its Chamber of Commerce, whose membership is possibly the largest of any Chamber in the State.

Through the efforts of this organization the construction of [illegible] of these factory buildings was financed by local capital. The moving of these plants to Keene from other sections has been distributed over this period, the last, a cigar factory, which now employs [illegible] hands, having located here late in 1926. While the Chamber is still on the alert for other factories, the expansion of those already here has not been overlooked, several of these have added to their plants in the last year.

In choosing new industry the Keene [illegible] has adhered strictly to a policy of diversity. [illegible] has said, "In union there is strength;" this is not so with industry, but in diversity there is security against labor troubles and depressions. At the present time Keene has 41 factories producing 35 different lines of goods, including auto supplies, wooden and paper boxes, broom handles, chairs, [illegible] [illegible], candy, drill presses, [illegible], brooms, [illegible], glue and gelatine, [illegible], marking and embossing machines, [illegible], [illegible] products—[illegible] and grinding, narrow fabrics and [illegible], overalls, pants, [illegible] and pails, pails [illegible] and wooden porch furniture, portable houses, musical instruments, ice cream, printing, screens, doors and window sash, shoes—men, women and children's—silk yarn, silver polish, soft drinks, mechanical toys, artificial stone, woolens, wood heels, wooden ware, combs, celluloid toilet articles, washing products and shirts. Due to this diversity, Keene has never experienced a depression.

Another evidence of Keene's prosperity is the fact that four out of five of her banks have thoroughly remodeled their quarters within the last [illegible] and the fifth is now erecting a handsome new building at the head of Central Square. The combined deposits of these banks 10 years ago was $8,471,471.00. On January 1st, 1927 the combined deposits was $[illegible],182.00, this is an increase of [illegible] per cent. in 10 years. The approximate average deposit per person in Keene is $[illegible] as against an average of $32.00 per person in the United States. The average weekly clearings of our three national banks is $2,586,000.00.

And still another evidence of our steady, substantial growth is the fact that in the last six years more than 400 houses of residential type have been built.

Not only is Keene an industrial city, a substantial city, a prosperous city, but with its 220 acres of parks, hundreds of picturesque homes, 100 miles of wide streets, 40 miles of which are shaded by giant elm trees, it is the most beautiful city in New England. Mount Monadnock, rising high into the heavens, is a sentinel resting its shoulders to protect Keene from unfriendly blasts and smiling down upon her while she works and plays in the valley below. Dotted with sparkling lakes, woodland hills and emerald forests, this section of New Hampshire is made beautiful—a paradise for those who love nature's beauties.

Audience Holds Applause Till End of Act

In most operas it is proper to halt the action for a moment to permit a singer to acknowledge applause for an impressive area and the performer will step out of his role long enough to make a bow or two to his admirers.

Not so with the German music drama. From beginning to end the action went on unbroken, and the audience, sensing that interruptions would be out of place, held its applause until the close of each act.

WHAT HAD MADE THE STANDARD OIL COMPANY?

DETAILS of that conversation between Rockefeller, supposed to have one billion, and Ford, supposed to have two billions, would be as interesting as the visit of Heine, the young poet, to Goethe, the old poet. Heine had a speech made up, but forgot it when he saw Goethe.

The two U. S. A. financial poets probably talked about the Florida climate, not about billions at all.

LAST NIGHT, just after the sun had gone, and when the sky began to grow dark, Jupiter and Venus were seen in the West, a brilliant, beautiful sight. They seemed almost to touch, although separated by 400,000,000 miles, their nearest approach.

In that "approximate stellar conjunction" there were many lessons. Both planets shine by the reflected light of the sun. Jupiter's diameter is 11 times that of Venus, but Venus seemed much more brilliant, being [illegible]000,000 miles closer to us than Jupiter. Closeness always deceives us. To millions, for instance, the Browning [illegible] seemed more important than that of Warren Hastings, John Brown or Joan of Arc.

MORE SKYROCKETS in Wall Street yesterday, in that financial garden of intensive cultivation interests. Mr. Rockefeller owns big stock in a railroad called Wheeling & Lake Erie. Somebody wanted to combine that railroad with some other railroad and the price went up.

Then foolish bears said, "This won't last," and sold "short." They learned yesterday how dangerous it is to sell what they don't own, especially if it happens to belong to John D. Rockefeller.

Peaceably playing golf, he has nothing to do with the movement. But those that sold the stock couldn't get it to deliver, and the price went up $60 a share above a recent selling price.

Selling short in this land is dangerous business. Selling Rockefeller stocks short calls for a guardian.

WASHINGTON says the McNary-Haugen bill for farm relief will actually go through, helped by Southern Democrats. A year ago McNary-Haugen were kicked around our legislative halls most pitifully. Nobody was back of them except wheat and corn farmers, all incurable Republicans anyhow.

But now cotton is down and Southern Democrats think that something really ought to be done for the farmers. Something very likely will be done or tried. How it will work out time will tell.

SENATOR HOWELL says any law concerning radio should proclaim and establish the fact that "the government owns the air." That, theoretically, is exactly right, for, theoretically, the people own the government, and certainly ought to own the air.

But worthy single taxers think that government, the people, ought to own the earth, and know by sad experience how wide a gap separates "ought" from "is." Man is an inquisitive animal, and when air becomes valuable, he finds a way to own it.

MR. BANTON, district attorney of New York, plans to give up the idea of a jury to pass on immoral plays, and will take those producers of indecence direct to the grand jury, putting them in prison if he can. Results will be interesting, showing what the public really thinks about indecency, and how far our Puritan ideas have relaxed since the days of "The Black Crook."

That "shocker" of older times, with ladies in high heels, laced boots and modest tights, would seem frightfully dull now.

TRISTAN BRINGS CLIMAX

Chicago Civic Singers Render Wagner Masterpiece

By MOSES SMITH

THE climax of the short season of opera that is now annually allotted to Boston was reached last night in the performance of Wagner's "Tristan und Isolde" for the first time since the travelling German company gave it here several years ago. When we say "climax" it is not to indicate that the Chicago opera company may not have some very fine musical sweetmeats in store, but that for opera-lovers, hearing and seeing "Tristan" remains a unique experience.

That was proved by the character of the audience drawn to the Boston Opera House last night, an audience which apparently included everyone socially and musically prominent in these parts. The house was sold out weeks in advance, an obvious indication of how starved Boston is for Wagnerism music-drama.

When the reviewer sets down these facts he is really only sparring for time. To speak about the opera itself with any approach to soundness and clarity is a difficult thing to do an hour or two after the performance. This "Tristan" music, for one who has not heard it entire since that performance of the Germans almost four years ago, has an inebriating effect.

MANY PITFALLS

Of course your matter-of-fact critic can say that the drama is mostly ridiculous and preposterous, that Wagner was not a master of the theatre in this opera; that the poem, which that obstinate creature wrote himself, is faulty and occasionally absurd. The man who sees only prosaic things may maintain stoutly that it is impossible to find a tenor who can at once combine histrionic ability and vocal technique adequate for his share of the score with the appearance of the courtly and romantic knight that is Tristan. This same "no" man will insist that if you can get a suitable Tristan you have the problem of Isolde all over again.

It is true that a performance of Wagner's masterpiece is filled with all sorts of pitfalls. And yet, we say scornfully, "What of it?" Let anyone listen to this opera of heroic love and death, and if, when the great Liebestod begins in the third act, he does not have a catch at his throat, he must have a heart of stone.

SYMPHONIC POEM

The music is what gets you. Never has passion been painted in more glowing colors, never has the art of tone been used with such telling effect. The music is positively inflammatory, but, more important, it is beautiful. We have seen old men grow momentarily young while listening to it. Music written at white heat, it has the effect of intoxication upon the listener as it probably had of auto-intoxication upon the composer.

The first act of "Tristan," while it contains many glowing pages that only Wagner could have penned, is not of uniform greatness. But the second act is one long symphonic poem, a monument in opera and all music. So, too, with most of the third act, especially the Liebestod, which recapitulates the overwhelming sorrow that takes hold on the listener.

Last night's production was a series of surprises. It is no secret that Americans have not been strikingly successful with the greater Wagner. And leaving out of account the manipulation of the ever-welcome music, we could not become enthusiastic somehow on learning of the projected staging of "Tristan" by the Chicago company.

STARS AS ISOLDE

But fears were groundless, for the performance in actuality was a good one. The "star" was the person whose name appeared at the bottom of the cast on the program, Giorgio Polacco, conductor. A man of thorough knowledge and authority in operatic technique generally, of wide taste, one of the greatest operatic conductors in the world, Mr. Polacco proved his musical catholicism in the direction of the enormously difficult "Tristan" score. He guided everything with a firm hand, obtained an astonishingly brilliant performance from his orchestra, and received deserved plaudits from both audience and performers during the intermissions.

The very difficult role of Isolde, to whom is allotted the singing of almost the entire first act, was filled by Elsa Alsen. When she sang here four years ago she was already a trained Wagnerian player, but in spite of the passage of years she was last night fairer to look upon, sang with consummate artistry, and acted with a sure knowledge of the drama. Altogether a great Isolde.

ROSE TO HEIGHTS

Those who have judged Charles Marshall by his previous work in Boston could not have dreamed that he would have made an effective Tristan, yet he was one of the big surprises.

His voice had hitherto undisplayed power and the Wagnerian quality. In the first act and, at odd moments in the third, he rose to greatness. His enunciation was not good, nor, sad to say, was that of most of the company, with the exception and Mme. Alsen and Alexander Kipnis. In their cases it was possible for a listener with a mere nodding acquaintance of the German language to understand the words.

Kipnis was cast as King Marke.

Marshall Rises to Heights in Title Role of Opera

and his treatment of the role gave unalloyed pleasure. What a beautiful voice has this man, and how surely and yet simply he creates the illusion of the character he is interpreting. Cyrena van Gordon sang the music given to Brangaene with her accustomed opulent voice, but she has been seen to better advantage in another of Wagner's music dramas, "Die Walkure."

Richard Bonelli, appearing as Kurvenal the faithful, made a good showing; if not a great one, it was because the great Wagnerian singing actor must have years of schooling in his specialty. For the same reason any faults of the remainder of the cast should be overlooked—and they were minor faults. After all, the main thing is having "Tristan" performed more than once or twice in a generation.

WOMEN PLAN WORLD MEET IN CAPITAL

New York, Feb. 5 (A.P.)—A world welfare conference to be held in Washington in May was announced here today by Mrs. C. C. Calhoun, who is president of the Women's Universal Alliance, sponsor for the conference.

"The meeting plans for the consideration of united welfare work, both in this and other nations," Mrs. Calhoun said.

"The United States, for example, today the world's richest and most powerful nation, is far down among the civilized nations in scientific measures for women in childbirth and pre-natal care of the child. Education and home economics will be discussed and legislation affecting women and children.

GOAL OF ALLIANCE.

"The first world welfare conference of the Women's Universal Alliance, which was held in Washington in 1923, resulted in concrete benefits in many countries.

"France has formed a branch of the alliance; the women of England, Scotland, Spain and other European countries and of the South American nations, have also joined in the work.

"The ultimate goal of the alliance is the erection of a building of service as a memorial to motherhood and to the inestimable services of the pioneer women of the past whose names are dying out of tradition and to whom this generation owes the duty of redeeming them from oblivion.

"The slogan of the organization is 'A tribute to the past,' a service to the present and an inspiration to the future."

SHRINE FOR WOMEN.

"The memorial is not to be an empty shrine, but a centre where great and priceless symbols, relics and family archives will be preserved.

"It will be a shrine where names of great women of each State and country will be fittingly commemorated; a centre for home culture and for mother and child welfare; for the establishment of a loan fund where youth of tested talent may receive material aid in their chosen vocations; a centre for arts, industries and science."

The memorial will be established in Washington.

Of Course, This May Be True.

Among other bits of philosophy in "Judy", now moving out of the Hollis, is the remark made by one of the characters to the effect that the reason milkmen seldom marry is because they see so many women very early in the morning.

STAGE AND SCREEN

She Has Pretty Eyes, Too.

When a local doctor charged Pert Kelton of "Sunny" five dollars for removing a speck from her eye, she exclaimed, "Heavens, you should be down in Florida selling real estate," thereby causing a laugh and a two-dollar discount.

THREE NEW ATTRACTIONS MOVE IN WITH BRIGHT STARS TO DAZZLE THE PLAYGOER

LORDING IT OVER BYRON is Frances Starr in this scene with Arthur Byron taken from her new play, "The Shelf," which opens Monday at the Plymouth.

MISS LINDA, as you see her among the gambols of "Sunny" at the Colonial, dances her way to popularity with Boston audiences in the most eye-soothing manner.

SOPHIE TUCKER arrives Monday, with what has been called a "gay galaxy" of sheiks and shebas, to lead the Tremont back to the syncopated ways of the drama in "Lemaire's Affairs."

NINA OLIVETTE sweeps along in successive weeks of popularity with "Queen High," girl and music festival, at the Wilbur.

MYSTERY, according to one great philosopher, is woman's fullest charm. Here's proof. In "The Triple Cross," shivery thriller at the Park, Margaret Wycherly and Natacha Rambova deal most extensively in these precious endowments.

WOMEN TAKE LIGHTS, MEN TURN IN DEEDS

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

WHETHER you accept the authorized announcements as solemn news or make up your own mind on the subject, musical comedy is just as funny—and no more—than the masculine comedian makes it. There are glaring examples of this in the local drama, in which fluttering femininity draws heavily upon electric signs while sturdy and perspiring males do their best to keep their audiences at proper temperature and interest. Undoubtedly the most striving comedian of the current stage is Jack Hazzard of "Queen High," a toiler in the arts of cautious musical drama. Incidentally, Mr. Hazzard, without the usual argument, is probably the most comical comic the musical comedy stage has provided in these stirring days of high prices for good entertainment.

CURIOUSLY enough, a successful musical comedy is promoted principally through the more or less scintilating talents of some feminine toiler in the arts. As a fair example we have Marilyn Miller in "Sunny," in which Jack Donahue and his own brand of local frivolities baffles the spectators. Also we have John E. Hazzard, who makes "Queen High" a teaser for suit and cloak buyers and others who prefer laughs instead of tears with their theater. Mr. Hazzard, being only one of three in a triple star diagram has had serious work laid out for his talents. Naturally he makes the most of his opportunities.

IT may be said, in all fairness, that while Marilyn Miller needs the dancing feet of Jack Donahue to make "Sunny" the riot of the season, Julia Sanderson and Frank Crumit lean heavily upon the testy comedy of Jack Hazzard to give "Queen High" its nightly draw. Mr. Hazzard accepts his honors graciously—he takes them as they come and is satisfied. Doubtless Mr. Donahue of "Sunny" shrugs a shoulder and nods an artistic approval when the nightly jam of theatregoers applaud and cheer the graceful antics of Marilyn Miller. Mr. Hazzard does the same for Miss Sanderson.

HOWEVER the hardened playgoer may view it, Marilyn Miller has received much in artistic glory for which she should thank Jack Donahue, and Julia Sanderson, even more seasoned in the ways of the theater, should make devout obesience to Jack Hazzard, the really honest funny man of the current drama. Taking an unbiased view of the town's musical comedy ventures, it must be admitted that the men have much the best of the situation. Jack Donahue strips "Sunny" of any particular glory not concerned with his own efforts and Jack Hazzard contributes even more for the popularity of "Queen High." That is musical comedy.

PURITAN JOY DIVINE

YE OLDE TYME ROMANCE in "The Scarlet Letter" at Loew's Orpheum. Lillian Gish and Lars Hansen present their most pink-tipped compliments to each other in this prim moment from Hawthorne's story of woeful wooing.

Frank's Aide

ROBERTA ARNOLD comes to town with Frank Craven in "Money From Home," to open Monday night at the Hollis.

LIDO BAND AT KEITH'S

Whether or not avoirdupois has anything to do with musical ability is a question, but it is a peculiar coincidence that one of Paul Whiteman's greatest musical rivals is also his foremost competitor when it comes to making a substantial showing on the weighing scales. The young man in question is Jacques Renard who is to appear at B. F. Keith's next week. He will be assisted by his Lido Venice Orchestra.

Ordinarily it would be a long jump from musical scales to weighing scales, but Paul and Jacques make the two into an algebraic equation. In spite of their rivalry on the scales, they are very good friends and it was through the recommendation of Mr. Whiteman that Renard was given his two-year contract with the Victor record people.

Renard's style of interpreting popular music is similar to that of Paul Whiteman in that they both use the symphonic method of playing jazz, which is more melodious and pleasing to the ear than the variety usually heard, and yet the peculiar rhythmic beat is maintained. Leaders of orchestras strive to obtain this effect, but few are successful, with the result that those who are like Jacques Renard are much in demand.

Film Ammunition Keeper Must Watch His Step

His name is Jack Little. But his job is a big one. He looks after the explosives during the filming of pictures. When Buster Keaton wanted somebody to take care of all the dynamite and powder to be used in "The General," new film comedy at Loew's State, he got in touch with Mr. Little.

Fifteen years ago the unusual "powder man" got interested in pictures. He has been injured four times and was nearly blown to bits during the filming of "The General' in Oregon. When the soldiers were trooping across the fields in "The Big Parade," Little kept the powder under surveillance. Naturally, therefore, Buster picked the same powder man to do the honors for the ammunition employed by the Southerners and Northerners in the Keaton film.

NEXT WEEK'S NEW BILLS

HOLLIS—Frank Craven in "Money From Home." A mixture of small town comedy with dashes of Broadway for seasoning. Of course, as you may suspect, Mr. Craven also is the author. In the supporting cast are Roberta Arnold, Leo Donnelly, Camilla Dalberg, Fred Graham, Adora Adams and John Ravold. Staged by Mr. Craven. Produced by A. L. Erlanger.

PLYMOUTH—Frances Starr in "The Shelf." A comedy by Dorrence Davis, in which the central thought touches intimately the fleeting years of a woman who has lived well and brilliantly. In the supporting cast are Arthur Byron, Donald Meek, Lee Patrick, Lawrence Leslie, Louise Kimball, Florence Earle and Leah Winslow. Produced by William B. Friedlander.

TREMONT—"LeMaire's Affairs," a musical revue presenting Sophie Tucker, Ted Lewis and Lester Allen as a triple star combination. Eye and ear entertainment for the multitude. Skits and travesties by Andy Rice, Ballard Macdonald, Jack Lait and Edgar Allen Wolff; lyrics by Ballard Macdonald; music by Martin Broones; dances and ensembles directed by Bobby Connolly. Twenty-eight principals and the usual chorus are included. Staged by William Halligan. Produced by Rufus LeMaire.

* * *

ST. JAMES—(Stock) "The Show Off," a play of American life in West Philadelphia by George Kelly. Originally popular as a Pulitzer prize winner. First time here at popular prices. Walter Gilbert has the role of Aubrey Piper, the "show-off." Also in the cast are Florence Shirley and others of the Keith Albee company.

REPERTORY—"Tornado," by Edward Knoblock. A story of Englishmen in South Africa, with natives thrown in for good measure. In the cast are Henry Jewett, Ruth Taylor, Ralph Roberts, Guy Phillips, Agnes Elliot Scott, Augusta Gill, Louis Leon Hall, William Mason and William Faversham.

HIGH-NOTED TENOR HAS FREEDOM OF THE C'S

ROY CROPPER is caught by the cartoonist in a burst of song during "Castles in the Air" at the Shubert. Out Jamaica Plain way they still remember the days when Roy raised a boyish soprano at the Agassiz Grammar School.

Princess Pat

PATSY RUTH MILLER, regal and stately, will be discovered with Monte Blue in "Wolf's Clothing" at the Modern and Beacon.

WALSH LANDS SOLIDLY

The mantle of directorial fame now descends on the shoulders of Raoul Walsh, who directed "What Price Glory," now at the Majestic. Even with such master films as "The Wanderer" and "The Thief of Bagdad" already to his credit, it wasn't until "What Price Glory" emerged in cinema form that his genius for direction lifted him to a place alongside the first rank directors.

Walsh was born in New York city and was educated at St. Francis Xavier's. His first introduction to the movies was as an actor in "The Birth of a Nation," where he played the role of John Wilkes Booth. Immediately thereafter he dropped histrionics for the megaphone and has been directing pictures ever since.

"Directing 'What Price Glory,'" states Raoul Walsh, "was not an ordinary film assignment to me. I knew the play and knew that William Fox wanted a screen epic. But I knew more than that. I knew 'What Price Glory' meant more to me than any picture I had ever before directed. Here was drama, comedy, spectacle, all in one picture. If ever I wanted an opportunity to show the kind of director I was, I had it now. I set to work on the picture, determined to make it the best drama ever filmed."

St. James Character Actor Was Born to the Stage

John Winthrop character man of the Keith-Albee stock company at the St. James, was born to the stage. His mother was an actress and when he was sixteen years old he tried the stage for himself and has been an actor ever since. His debut was short, however, as he was sent back to Columbia University to finish his education.

As soon as he had finished at Columbia he started on his career and has not only played "on the boards" but has written three one-act sketches, two of which were successful.

For the past eight years he has been playing "characters" and in order to correctly portray the countless roles he has been called to create, he has been forced to spend much of his time studying.

Printemps With a French Cast Follows Opera

The charming and gifted Yvonne Printemps will come to the Boston Opera House on Monday night, February 14, with her husband, Sacha Guitry, actor of the first order and author of a vast number of brilliant plays and smart revues. She will act and sing in "Mozart," a comedy with music written for her by Sacha Guitry.

Yvonne Printemps

Mr. Guitry has but recently entered his forties. He was born, by the record, in 1885, and in what is now Petrograd, Russia, and the beautiful Yvonne, who is his second wife, is still in her twenties.

They met, as the story goes, after M. Guitry had watched Mlle. Printemps cavorting about the stage of the Folies Bergere.

'FOR ALIMONY ONLY'

"'TWAS ON A NIGHT LIKE THIS" that Leatrice Joy and Clive Brook took a ride in the new sedan to find out if the rear seat were as snug as the salesman said. The outcome is "For Alimony Only" at the New Boston.

"Ghost Train" Gets New Actor.

Rupert Lucas, an actor of the English stage, has been snared by E. E. Clive for the Copley, and will make his first appearance here on Monday in the leading role of "The Ghost Train." Jo Di Pesa warns us that Lucas speaks five languages.

STAGE AND SCREEN

This Boy Must Have Talent.

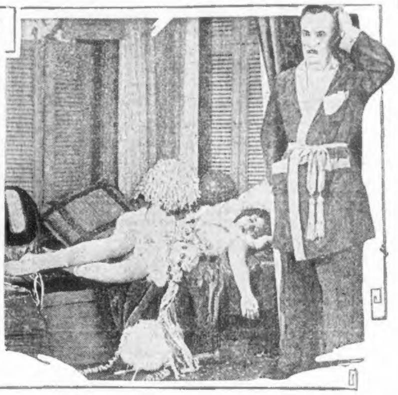
Edward E. Paramore, Jr., author of "The Triple Cross" at the Park, doesn't care what he does for a living. Already, at 27, he has been a miner in Arizona, a professional ball player in California, and a teacher of English in Connecticut.

RANDOM SHOTS OF SCENES AND FOLKS CULLED FROM THE NEW WEEK'S FILM FEAST

MARRIED MONOTONY settles itself like dust in the rain on Lya de Putti and Ricardo Cortez in "The Sorrows of Satan," at the Metropolitan. In making this mating, Satan has much to be sorry for.

THE BAG OF TRICKS Buster Keaton uses in "The General," his latest laugh-raiser at Loew's State, is stuffed like a sausage with all manner of pleasant things. If you watch closely he will spring a lot of new ones about the Civil War.

SWEET ADENOID! In "What Price Glory," at the Majestic, Sammy Cohen and Ted McNamara get "potted" on a few jugfuls and, for the special benefit of Dolores Del Rio, tune up their tonsils with a magnificent display of bridgework.



CAME THE DAWN and a riddle, and thick grey clouds in a leaden sky. And the befuddled gentleman must chase himself around to find out whence came the strange maiden. Lewis Stone and Ann Borr finally clear themselves in "The Blonde Saint" (Olympic).

BUILDS JAZZ B UNIQUE METHOD

Ted Lewis, "High-Hatted Tragedian of Melody and Song," and the star of "LeMaire's Affairs," opening Monday at the Tremont, is not only unique in method, but original in the manner of the presentation of his musical offerings. He waves no magic wand to lure melodious harmony from his "Merry Musical Clowns." They play by instinct, not by note. Perhaps that is why this jazz band has won world-wide fame.

Ted Lewis

Speaking of his unconventional presentation of syncopated tone-poems, Mr. Lewis offers an interesting and timely explanation. "We just pick out a piece that appeals to us and learn to play it. I never conduct the numbers. I think the funniest sight in the world is to see a director of a jazz outfit—which should fairly tingle with tempo in every toe and finger tip—standing up and swinging a little stick, 'beating time,' for a gang of temperamental tunehounds who play with sheet music in front of them.

"Why, even in my earliest struggles as an entertainer, I made it a rule to teach my boys the basic or motive melody of a new number, then tear the music up. We all play by instinct, just as one whistles a tune.

Patsy Miller Got Started With Buster Keaton

Patsy Ruth Miller, now being featured in "Wolf's Clothing" at the Modern and Beacon, was born in St. Louis, Mo., in 1904, and educated in the private schools of her native city. When her family visited California in 1921, lovely dark-eyed Patsy was offered a part in one of Buster Keaton's pictures. She was speedily chosen to play opposite Lon Chaney in "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" and followed this success with many other notable productions.

WATCHES THE HOME FOR DRAMA

If one is possessed of an average vocabulary it is the easiest thing in the world to write a play, according to Frank Craven, whose latest comedy, "Money from Home," will open at the Hollis Monday night, with the author himself in the star part. Any number of people are ambitious to write for the stage and those who have attempted it confess that the great difficulty is in hitting upon a story that will be interesting. This came out when someone asked the actor-author what kind of play under usual conditions was most likely to succeed. To his way of thinking—and he feels that he has furnished proof of his belief in "The First Year," "Too Many Cooks" and "New Brooms"—the public has always had a leaning toward family life. Furthermore, it is a known fact that people like to see themselves or others with whom they are intimately acquainted, reproduced on the stage.

Frank Craven

"People are usually interested in the family play," says Mr. Craven, "because almost everyone has a family. The chief elements in many plays nowadays are love and financial interests, and that is about the range of the interests in the average family.

Courage and a Trick Lands Job for Clive Brook

"I haven't made a picture since the war!" As a matter of fact he hadn't even appeared before the motion picture camera when he made that statement—but he got the job just the same.

Clive Brook, who supports Leatrice Joy in "For Alimony Only" at the Keith-Albee Boston, has been in pictures but a few years.

He began his career in London, following successful stage engagements there. The photoplay which brought him to American attention was "This Freedom," in which he supported Betty Compson.

EVERYWOMAN CAN ACT

By FRANCES STARR

With "The Shelf" at the Plymouth

I wonder if there is a woman in the world who at some time in her life has not secretly or openly desired to go on the stage. As little children we make believe, and I know that some of my best acting was done in pinafore and pigtails in front of a mirror in my tiny bedroom at home.

Frances Starr

Through girlhood and womanhood these moments prompt a woman to think what a great actress she could be if she had the opportunity. Now I earnestly wish that every woman could act. Some wise gentleman is probably saying, "They do most of the time." But I mean really act a part—feel the mental and emotional stimulation of creating a character outside themselves—not as a profession but as a healthful and psychologically sound means of expression for which the humdrum every-day business of living provides no outlet.

Women have a reputation for making scenes or indulging in tears about nothing. I don't suppose there is a husband living who has not said to his wife: "What are you crying about?" and been a little impatient or mystified when he got the sobbing reply, "I don't know." Now I maintain that actresses should be the most balanced women in the world, because they have a legitimate outlet for their emotions.

Not So Very Dumb This Time.

The literal minded doughboy who spent an afternoon in front of the Majestic waiting for "The Big Parade" to pass is at it again. He has seen "What Price Glory" and, asked if it did not look like real war, grumbled, "Yeh, but where were the cooties."

STAGE AND SCREEN

Making "Horse Opera" Star.

This yarn is told of Fred Thomson, "Western" ace, at the Fenway. When he applied for his first movie job there were many other candidates. Showing rare judgment, the Big Boss left the decision to the office stenographers. Fred won.

'SORROWS OF SATAN' ARE EXPLAINED

What were the sorrows of Satan?

The popular conception of Satan has usually been that of a sinister individual who derived great pleasure from the work of conducting a subterranean rotisserie. Worries, cares and sadness have always been foreign to his supposed make up. Marie Corelli gave him a new description in "Sorrows of Satan," the new film at the Metropolitan. She decided that to be effective, temptation must be attractive. So she made Satan a polished man of the world. Unlimited wealth was at his disposal. He moved in the highest social circles. Yet he was sorrowful. A brooding sadness enveloped him. Why?

Adolphe Menjou

Some say Miss Corelli chose the title because it was effective and sensational. Others insist she wanted to be different and vindicate the reputation of a personage badly in need of it. Anyway, the author produced one of the world's best sellers.

She chose to emphasize the ancient idea that Satan was a fallen angel. Throughout, when he pursues his occupation of putting temptation before weak characters he is saddened by success. It delays the time when he can return to the angelic state.

Those are his sorrows!

Star Works As Extra In New Film at the Olympia

Milton Sills is an "extra" in the "Blonde Saint," new film at the Washington St. Olympia. The star, whose salary runs into thousands of dollars a week, worked one scene and got a pay check for $7.50, the usual fee for "atmospheres." It happened this way: Doris Kenyon and Lewis Stone, starred in "The Blonde Saint," had to go on location on the S. S. Ruth Alexandria, en route from San Pedro to San Diego. Mr. Sills, then engaged to Miss Kenyon, now Mrs. Sills, accompanied her.

Milton Sills

Several persons were to promenade the deck in the background of a scene in which Miss Kenyon and Mr. Stone were the principals. Bob Ross, assistant director to Svend Gade, put into service none other than Milton Sills

OVERCOMING SUPERSTITION

By MARGARET WYCHERLY

With "The Triple Cross" at the Park

I have not the slightest doubt but what more than half of the world's population are nearly scared to death when they are confronted with anything appertaining to mystery, spooks and black art. I distinctly remember that in my younger days I would never go to witness a performance that in any way had to do with this sort of thing. I tried for years to overcome these fears and was heartily ashamed of myself for allowing anything of this sort to enter my stage career.

Margaret Wycherly

During my long experience I have been called upon to play many parts, and if you will pardon me for blowing my own horn, I have the credit of being very successful. For years I went along nicely, being cast for parts that were to my taste, but there came a fatal day when I was offered a lead in one of the first big mystery plays.

The part was what we stage folks termed "a corker." After reading the part and having most unusual terms submitted to me, I pulled myself together and the temptation to appear in my first mystery play overcame all my superstition. I finally yielded and it did not take me long to get over the dread of appearing in them. My role in "The Triple Cross" is surely mysterious enough to suit anyone. Mystery plays I think will always be popular. Every minute something is transpiring on the stage that keeps the audience in bewilderment.

BANNERMAN CONCERT

Joyce Bannerman, soprano, will be heard in a concert at Jordan Hall on Tuesday evening, February 15th. An unhackneyed collection of ancient songs and compositions by German, French and American composers makes up the program.

Keep It Dark, But There Are Two Millers In "Sunny"

There are two Millers in "Sunny" at the Colonial, but only one who appears on the program under that name. That one of course is Marilyn Miller, radiant star of the show.

The other Miller is Miriam Miller, only the program lists her as Miriam Crosby, as it would never do to have two girls of such strikingly similar names in the same show. Miss Crosby is the daughter of Rear Admiral Walter Crosby Miller and acquired her stage name by adopting her father's middle name.

Miriam Crosby

Miss Crosby is a native of Cincinnati. She appeared in two series of the Music Box Revue and secured her first engagement with "Good Morning Dearie." She was understudy to Mary Hay

LLOYD STAYS AT FENWAY

Jobyna Ralston

With the second week's engagement of the Harold Lloyd feature, "The Kid Brother," at the Fenway, a bit of history forms itself with Boston movie houses. Local film theatres devoted to a weekly change of bill have never before carried over an attraction beyond its allotted time. Even with the pretentious movie palaces in New York, it is only comparatively recently that a program picture drew such overwhelming patronage to warrant the extension of its run.

While such films in the "road show" class, such as "The Big Parade" and "What Price Glory," has invade the downtown drama and continue to coax a steady custom for weeks at a time, it is seldom possible, even on Broadway, that a picture theatre depending on a weekly clientele can approach anything like a "run" for any of its attractions.

Breaking all attendance records at the Fenway during the past week, "The Kid Brother" piles up its own score for the popularity of Harold Lloyd and—to make it sound bigger—brings the remote regions of Massachusetts avenue closer to Broadway.

Charlie Ray to Appear in Many Films

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS,
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 5.—The young woman who wrote lamenting that she did not hear enough about Charlie Ray will change her tune before the end of 1927. Not only will she hear plenty about his plans, but she will see him often in picture. He has just finished "The Flag Maker."

In view of the number of offers that have come to him he has definitely decided not to align himself with any one company, but to free lance. That will be welcome tidings to all the studios that find it difficult to get a young man of just Mr. Ray's type.

Leatrice Joy

It was good news for Cecil De Mille when he was looking for a leading man to play opposite Leatrice Joy in "Vanity." That will be Charlie's next picture under the direction of Donald Cresp.

"Vanity" is that long talked-of story from the pen of Lenore Coffee and is a promise that we shall see Leatrice Joy in something better. Let us hope so, for one of the unfortunate things in 1926 was Miss Joy's lack of proper opportunity in the selection of screen material.

AGNES CHRISTINE JOHNSTONE has come back from Europe with more ideas than she ever had in her life. In fact, after talking with her, Irving Thalberg decided to hurry and sign her on a new contract before any other producers came seeking her services.

In other words, Miss Johnstone, who in private life is Mrs. Frank Dazey, remains on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot. Her work in "Beverly of Graustark" did more to promote her than any other scenario. It brought not only Miss Johnstone fame, but established a new record for Miss Davies as well.

I HAVE OFTEN WONDERED WHY MORE old time actors do not direct. Certainly the experience that comes with years is an invaluable training. Victor Potel is answering my question by being engaged to write and direct twenty-six comedies for Universal.

That is a large order for any young man, especially when thirteen of them are to bear the trad mark "Sweet Sixteen," and the others are to be called "Snappy Pictures."

Churchill Ross, who appeared in most of the "collegian" series, has been engaged to star in one half of the Potel comedies and Arthur Lake in the rest.

20 AUTOS AND GARAGE BURN

Ashburnham, Feb. 5—More than twenty automobiles were burned today in flames that destroyed the garage at the Almond Manufacturing Company in the centre of the town and threatened to spread to the nearby factory, other buildings and dwellings.

The fire started with an explosion of gasoline in the garage. Employes of the plant, owners of most of the automobiles stored there, tried to save their cars but only a few succeeded.

Help was summoned from the Fitchburg Fire Department when local firemen found themselves unable to prevent the flames from spreading. Bitter cold handicapped them and large quantities of inflammable materials in the garage fed the flames.

The garage was a one-story building about sixty by forty feet.

STATE HONORS EXECUTED MAN

The State of Massachusetts, which last month took the life of John J. Devereaux in punishment of the Waltham carbarn murder, today issued a certificate of gratitude for the executed man's service in the late war.

The certificate, which is signed by Calvin Coolidge, who was Governor at the time the law authorizing these certificates was passed, reads in part as follows:

"The Commonwealth of Massachusetts to John J. Devereaux: The Commonwealth of Massachusetts, honoring the faithful services of those who formed a part of the land sea and air forces of the United States who were engaged during the war with the Imperial German government and Austria, in maintaining the integrity of the nation, has by a general act of the General Court of 1912, directed the undersigned to present to you this testimonial of the people's gratitude for your patriotism."

The certificate also carried the name of Adjutant General Jesse F. Stevens, through whose office it is issued.

The father of the executed man, John J. Devereaux, obtained the certificate.

JEWS TO HOLD 24-HOUR FAST

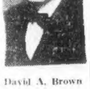
A rabbinical proclamation, believed to be the first ever issued in the United States, and calling upon the Jewish people of Boston to fast for 24 hours in sympathy with the suffering peoples of eastern Europe, was made today by Rabbi Isaac Marcus of the Federated Orthodox Congregations.



David A. Brown

The period of fasting is to be from this evening until tomorrow evening and Jewish leaders will observe the ending of the fast at a dinner at the Copley-Plaza Hotel, where eminent speakers will aid the raising of $600,000 in this city for European relief work.

David A. Brown of Detroit, who has spent a year and a half away from his business interests to serve as national chairman of the campaign for a $25,000,000 fund, will be a speaker and others will be U. S. Senator William H. King of Utah and Judge Harry Fisher of Chicago. Louis E. Kirstein is chairman of the Boston campaign committee.

WALES MAY VISIT U. S. AGAIN ON CANADA TRIP

London, Feb. 5 (A.P.)—The Prince of Wales will sail for Canada about August 1 unless unforeseen circumstances prevent his departure, it was stated authoritatively today.

At the same time the report that King George and Queen Mary might go to Canada for the celebration of the Diamond Jubilee of Canadian Confederation, was met with a statement that their Majesties will be unable to visit Canada this year. The Prince, who will attend the Jubilee celebration and spend some time on his ranch in Alberta, hopes to visit the United States again.

CHAPLIN LEARNS WHAT A DOG'S LIFE REALLY IS

JUST MISERY, MISERY

Here is Charley himself in a scene from "A Dog's Life," and perhaps he thinks many a day now that if he were the pup he might be comparatively happy.

Camera Was Chaplin's Fairy Godmother

studio, so fascinated the spectators of the screen that whenever Charlie Chaplin was there all others in the picture were forgotten.

Here was a face, homely, strong, not particularly fine or delicate as beheld by the human eye, but the alchemy of photography revealed in it pathos, humor and the rarest sensibility.

These traits must have been in the brain and heart of the actor, but they were undiscernable to the naked eye. The wizardry of photography alone made them visible and irresistible.

The Goddess Luck brought Mack Sennett, competent, experienced motion picture director, and Charlie Chaplin, ordinary vaudeville actor, together in the dressing room of a second-rate Philadelphia theatre.

The camera then "discovered" him. That fairy god-mother revealed qualities and gifts Chaplin himself did not know he possessed.

The first production under Sennett's direction with Charlie Chaplin as the star, was "The Champion," in which he sewed a horseshoe into a boxing glove and thus knocked out a comedy tough prizefighter three times his own size.

It was a short reel, but it was an instantaneous success. That was the first Charlie Chaplin film sent to Europe. It was as understandable in France, Italy and Germany as in England and America. Titles and sub-titles were translated into seven languages, including Russian.

In one short year the Mutual Film Corporation was paying the hitherto rather obscure vaudeville actor a salary of $200,000 a year. The greatest actors that ever lived had never received as much.

But other film producers realized that the value of Charlie Chaplin's talent was incalculable by any previous standards. For his films could be duplicated and Charlie Chaplin could draw tears and laughter in 1,000 theatres on the same night.

The next year, 1917, the First National Exhibitors took Charlie Chaplin away from the Mutual Film Corporation by contracting to star Chaplin in eight short (two reel) comedies and to pay him $1,000,000.

Some good managers said that no star could possibly be profitable to any one at such a figure. But the First National Exhibitors made money, nevertheless and tried to keep him after the contract expired.

But Charlie Chaplin, while doing his work producing short reels for his employers, decided to try much more elaborate, longer scenarios for himself. He incorporated himself in 1918.

Then came such films as "A Dog's Life," "Shoulder Arms," "Pay Day," "The Immigrant," "The Kid," "The Circus" and, later, "The Gold Rush."

For a short period beginning in 1919 Chaplin worked with Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Pickford and David Wark Griffith in The United Artists.

This combination, and the development of other stars like Marion Davies, the Talmadges, Thomas Meighan and others enlarged the moving picture business into a national institution requiring high art and enormous capital and appealing to more people as an entertainment than all the books that were ever written and all the pictures that were ever painted.

Shrewd American men of business began to build moving picture auditoriums in all the leading cities costing from two to five million dollars each and seating from 2,500 to 4,000 spectators.

London has since built two similar palaces. Berlin, Milan and Moscow are building such palaces and for American films. Paris alone of all great cities has not yet realized the possibilities of the movies, although everywhere American films are more popular there than any others.

Monday Mildred Harris will tell how Charlie Chaplin eschewed society; how he hated bores, and how most people bored him; how indifferent he was to the impression he made in casual meetings with others; and how he shunned most women.

PORTUGAL ARMY FIGHTS REBELS

Lisbon, Portugal, Feb. 5 (A.P.)—Serious fighting between government troops and revolutionaries is under way at Oporto, principal city of Northern Portugal, where a revolt broke out in the garrison Thursday.

There have been numerous casualties, dispatches say.

MOVE TO OPEN CHAPLIN'S SAFETY DEPOSIT BOXES

Los Angeles, Feb. 5 (I.N.S.)—Immediate steps will be taken to open Charlie Chaplin's safety deposit boxes here and in Hollywood banks, according to statements made here today by attorneys for Mrs. Lita Grey Chaplin.

Announcement to this effect came after District Attorney Asa Keyes' refusal to issue an order for Chaplin's arrest as requested by Mrs. Chaplin who charged her husband has not provided for his two babies. Keyes said the comedian's attorney, Lloyd Wright, had convinced him that Chaplin had been sending a $100 check every week to Mrs. Chaplin for the support of the children.

BOY WHO WOULD BE GIRL IS ONE AS RUNAWAY

Worcester, Feb. 5—Albert Hogue, 5, of West Boylston street, often wished he had been born a girl and now, it appears he has disappeared, fittingly attired as one.

Down in the cellar his clothing was found. Sales slips from a Worcester store show that pretty silk bloomers and some other articles of feminine attire were purchased. Furthermore, a cloak belonging to his sister, Clare, is missing.

This is not the first time the lad has donned feminine garb, but he never before went away. He has been gone since Wednesday, it was learned today.

Neighbors say Albert, on various occasions, has dressed in his sister's clothes and paraded up and down West Boylston street, making himself look so much like a sweet young miss that male autoists would nestle up alongside the curb to take him for a ride.

The father, John Hogue, says he is tired of the boy's antics and intends to "take measures" when he is found. Mr. Hogue thinks his son's resolve to go away was spurred by a visit this week from the probation officer, who made a complaint against Albert.

The lad is a pupil at Edgeworth street school. His mother died when he was three years old.

Old-Fashioned Girl For Wife Leads in Students' Poll

Los Angeles, Feb. 5 (I.N.S.)—It's the old-fashioned girl that appeals to the college student as a wife—in a straw vote, at least.

This is disclosed at the University of Southern California in ballots cast by 1,500 undergraduates on the question:

"What type of girl would you select as a wife?"

Forty per cent. voted in favor of the "old-style" lass, while 26 per cent. leaned toward the "flapper." The business and "clinging vine" types ran neck and neck, 17 per cent each.

LIGHT RATE CUT DEMANDED BY WINCHENDON

In line with the drive initiated by Representative Henry L. Shattuck and Governor Fuller for lower gas and light rates, more than 100 names were today filed by the Winchendon Merchants' Association with the Public Utilities Commission, petitioning for a reduction in the lighting rates of the Winchendon Electric Light and Power Company.

The rates of the company are characterized in the petition as "exorbitant, unreasonable and should be reduced."

To the more than twenty light companies that have already filed notices of reductions, voluntarily, the municipal lighting plant of Braintree today was added.

The Braintree municipal light board, effective April 1, will reduce the lighting rate to seven cents a kilowatt hour.

WHIPPING POST URGED TO CHECK CRIMINALS

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 5 (A.P.)—The whipping post as a means of combating crime would be authorized in Minnesota under a bill introduced in the State Senate. Whipping would be mandatory on conviction of certain specified offences. The court would fix the number of lashes.

Paul Doyle Is Fit for Go With Brown at Mello-Lee Show

By JACK CONWAY

THIS is going to be a great year for the graybeards of the ring.

Mike McTigue, close to 40, recently knocked out Paul Berlenbach and [illegible] to battle Jack Sharkey in New York on March 3.

[illegible] past 35, has been signed to swap blows with Pete Latzo in a [illegible] championship at Scranton, Pa., next [illegible] in the ring when [illegible]

John Conway

[illegible]

Instead of trying to [illegible] his own game. He kept Terry bouncing off the canvas for most of the fight.

Ask Terry to tell you about [illegible] himself and as [illegible] as an ex [illegible] fighting.

DOYLE later developed boxing skill. This [illegible] one of the most feared welterweights in the world.

[illegible] was the hero of the most sensational [illegible] I have ever seen [illegible] K. O. Loughlin of [illegible] was a mighty [illegible] and in the second round of a battle at the old Arena he knocked Doyle out on his feet with a fierce drive under the heart. Only Doyle's remarkable [illegible] enabled him to weather out the round. It was fighting instinct [illegible] that carried him through. He [illegible] told me that he did not know what happened from the time Loughlin hit him until he found his seconds throwing water on him in his corner.

As the bell sounded for the third round Doyle figured that Loughlin would come crashing [illegible] that is just what happened.

Doyle was still groggy, but he decided to go down fighting if necessary. He only took one step from his corner and set himself close to the ropes. As Loughlin hurled himself at his foe, Doyle drew back his right and let it drive for the jaw with every ounce of power he could muster. It landed with a resounding crash and Loughlin, with victory almost within his grasp, was knocked as cold as a clam.

EDDIE SHEVLIN has often said that Doyle is one of the hardest hitters he has ever faced. He [illegible] Shevlin every time they met, but [illegible] generalship always carried him through the crisis. Shevlin [illegible] at infighting [illegible] him to keep outside of Doyle's right hand most of the time.

[illegible] the most [illegible] defeat that [illegible] ever received. [illegible] most of the time and gave the Lawrence [illegible] boxing lesson. A [illegible] Kells the winner.

On Monday night at the Arena, Doyle will be opposed by one of the best of the new crop of welterweights in the person of Brown. The [illegible] is a rugged two-fisted fighter [illegible] plenty of heart. If [illegible] he will give [illegible] plenty of trouble.

MELLO and Lee will finish their heavy training today. The rival [illegible] are in the [illegible] confident [illegible] through with a victory. [illegible] Lee [illegible] him when [illegible] at Braves Field last summer.

[illegible] Lee, the Worcester welterweight [illegible] Joe Carver of Canton in one of the [illegible] round bouts [illegible] Holy Cross College, [illegible] was compelled to retire after his sophomore year. Now he has [illegible] one of whom has ambition to become a physician and the [illegible] to enter the priesthood, and [illegible] to provide the family [illegible] their expenses.

Henry Lamar, the light heavyweight [illegible] from Washington, will make his initial Boston appearance as a professional against the [illegible] Whitey Allen or [illegible] in a second eight round [illegible] slashing Cambridge [illegible] against Jim [illegible] Layne.

The American debut of Joe Morrison of Italy against Joe Rizzo of Cambridge in the opening four-round bout will afford the patrons an opportunity to get a glimpse of [illegible] who fought his way [illegible] the semi-final round of the Olympic championships and who easily won his only four professional bouts in Italy.

N.Y. Giants Face Woodsies at Walpole St. Today

By BILL McAULEY.

The New York Giants will provide the opposition for the Woodsies today at Walpole street in an American Soccer League game that promises to attract one of the largest crowds of the season. The contestants are noted for the bitterly fought and closely contested battles in the past, and today's game should equal any of them.

The last trip made here by the Giants was an unsuccessful one as far as points were concerned, as the Blue and Gold gained a decisive victory. At that time the McGhee eleven were close to the bottom in the race, but it has a different outlook now, for they are now in the first division and going strong.

[illegible] McGhee the peppery manager of the Giants, will bring [illegible] his full aggregation of stars in an effort to down the locals who have been mowing down all opposition since November. On the [illegible] of the Giants will be the six [illegible] stars that owner Vanderbeck imported from Vienna.

They are: Schartwa, Heirlander, Tonllerm, Hausleir, Gruenwald and Guttman. Along with Davie Brown, the leading scorer of the league, this sextette is given credit for the rapid rise of the Gothamites and according to reports the more acclimated they become the more improvement is shown in their play.

Another prominent player that draws a lot of attention from the fans is Douglas, the clever goalie of the Giants who guarded the uprights for Uncle Sam in the last Olympics.

The New Bedford and Providence games last week-end were hard ones, but the team stood up under them well.

Furnishing the Home

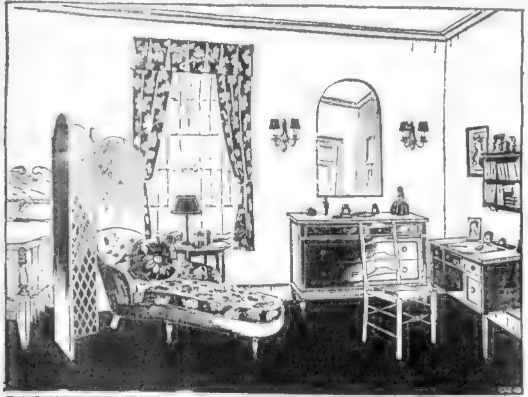
By MARIAN MOORE



YOU must not believe that the use of the chaise longue is restricted to the bedroom and boudoir. Properly upholstered to conform with the character of its various surroundings it has a legitimate place in the sun parlor.

For the sun parlor, a chaise longue of fiber or painted wicker may be selected with attractive upholstery of cretonne or blocked linen in large Jacobean designs. The neatly [illegible] pillows are in solid colors, stripes or small conventional patterns, and [illegible] woven or lightly quilted, in the dominant hue of the upholstery. Navajo blankets are good only if they fit into the color scheme and should be used with great discrimination. The rules [illegible] the choice of the over[illegible] living room set also apply to the living room chaise longue.

A walnut, mahogany or maple frame [illegible] smartly tailored [illegible] in hand-blocked linen, or pin-striped velour or black sateen with contrasting edges. The latter is particularly attractive and can be transformed for the summer by means of a cretonne slipcover.

The screen is often used in connection with a chaise longue, as a protection from draughts and [illegible] a mental sense of comfort and warmth. In the room [illegible] it creates [illegible] sitting room atmosphere in one side of the bed room by concealing the bed.

LEARN COMFORT OF BOOKS TO WHILE AWAY TIME

Is there anything more pitiful than an elderly person who cannot find pleasure in reading?

Yet there are many such persons.

In their youth and middle age they did not read good books and at an advanced age they have no desire to read.

After one has passed beyond the days of active labor and has nothing to while away his time but dreams of the past, his life becomes monotonous.

How long since you have read a good book?

Even now, at any age, you might make many dull hours pleasant if you have the reading habit.

Aside from limited newspaper perusal, what do you read?

Is your information any more extended, your thoughts any wider in scope than they were, say, ten years ago?

You have forgotten much that you learned at school and except for your experience, you are really not as intelligent and alert as you were years ago.

The mind is a wonderful thing.

But it refuses to function and serve unless we exercise it.

DIPLOMACY

By Bertha R. McDonald

"JARVIS," said Mrs. Hunt, replacing her cup in its saucer, the better to emphasize what she was about to say, "that daughter of ours is driving me most crazy! Her flirtations are the talk of the town. Why, only this morning Philomela Barnes called me up to tell me how terrible she had let Tommy down, after leading him on, too. I tell you something will have to be done about it!"

"Diplomacy—use diplomacy, my dear," remarked Hunt, taking refuge behind his paper. "Get her interested in other things—talk to her."

"Talk to her!" repeated the mother indignantly. "You try that yourself and see how far you get. She'll probably chuck you under the chin and call you a darling goose, same as she does me, and end up by singing s me flighty song!"

"All right, I'll show you," growled Hunt, throwing down his paper, thoroughly annoyed by this disturbing of his morning's peace. "I'll talk to [illegible] and I'll do it right now!"

He arose from the table abruptly and strode from the house, in the direction of the Summer [illegible] in the garden. From [illegible] its [illegible] severed sides there issued [illegible] and vocal runs which [illegible] of the whereabouts of his daughter.

"I tell you, my dear," he began, pacing up and down [illegible] his hands locked behind his back, "[illegible] of today do not respect [illegible]. They think we're [illegible] fogies, that we don't know [illegible]. I tell you, I believe a third [illegible] to more with Ann than [illegible] I can and I suggest [illegible]. He's not much older [illegible] in our class, still he [illegible]. Besides, I think she [illegible] rather kindly upon Jimmie. What do you say?"

"Perfectly all right [illegible]," Mrs. Hunt assented. "[illegible] splendid scheme if it works [illegible] if we can persuade Jimmie [illegible]. He's rather stand-offish [illegible], you know, but there's [illegible] like the present for an experiment with Ann. Call him up and rush him here while the girl's idle [illegible]."

Ann Hunt's flirtation had caused Jimmie Arlington even more trouble than they had caused her father or mother; but the trouble was of a different nature. Once upon a time Jimmie had indulged in a dream of love with Ann but in time his eyes had been opened to the fact that she was extremely fickle. So the dream vanished but Jimmie could never rid himself quite of its memory.

Meantime, Ann blossomed from a demure little maiden into an out and out society doll, the centre of a circle of admiring swains, upon whose heart strings she played a merciless tune.

In spite of all this, Jimmie and Ann had remained fast friends. And now at the risk of that friendship he had been persuaded, against his better judgment, to come over immediately and seek Ann out in the garden pavilion, where he was to take her gently to task for her flirtatious ways.

It was a brilliant moonlight night. Ann was singing blithely to herself when Jimmie pushed open the door of the little latticed house.

"Why—hello, Jimmie boy!" she greeted him cordially. "How perfectly sweet of you to happen along just when I need you most. S'pose you've heard how my last affair struck the rocks?"

"Well—er—no, not exactly," stammered the uncomfortable James. "Fact is, I've come over to talk to you on a very important subject, Ann. As an old friend, I think I may be permitted to express my mind on a—"

"Stop!" interrupted the young lady. "Sounds preachy. As an old friend, I think I may be permitted to retire if you're about to express what I don't want to hear."

"Wait a minute. Sit down, Ann. I'm thinking of your future happiness, my dear," he continued, with an attempt at fatherliness which the girl did not appear to appreciate.

"Applesauce!" she answered disgustedly. "It's a blessed wonder you wouldn't think of your own future happiness."

"Me? Oh I haven't any," he replied somewhat mournfully.

"How silly you talk, Jim and you not yet thirty," Ann answered.

"Answer me one question, Ann," Jimmie begged. "Have you ever really cared for any man?"

"Oh!" she cried out, as if he had hurt her. "Don't make me answer that, Jimmie—I—I just can't."

There was an uncomfortable moment of silence. Arlington felt that he was hopelessly lost in a maze of good intentions.

"I—I'm sorry, Ann," was what he heard himself saying. "If some fellow's hurt you, I—I'll wipe up the whole county with him!"

"You poor, dear, blind old Jimmie boy!" he heard Ann say. She was sitting motionless, with her eyes upon the floor.

Jimmie Arlington never quite understood how he happened to do it, but next thing he knew, he was across that pavilion floor with Ann in his arms. He kissed her and because she said nothing, he kissed some more.

"I used to dream of scenes like this years ago, little Ann," he whispered softly, holding her close.

"And how I've hated you all the time for only dreaming," she answered, with her fluffy head against his shoulder.

They never knew how long they had been standing there with their arms about each other when they were disturbed by a knock upon the door.

"Are—are you engaged, Miss?" a male voice inquired deferentially.

"Why—we—yes we're engaged—engaged to be married," Jimmie answered, speaking for her.

"Oh Jim!" she said in shocked tones. "You've told the chauffeur first!"

"Well! Having made such an auspicious beginning, I think we'd better get into the house and tell your father and mother," Jimmie declared.

MEDBURY SAYS---

By JOHN P. MEDBURY.

UNTIL a few months ago the automobile trade was the leading business in this country. But lately pocket mining has become the most profitable industry.

A POCKET miner is a lady who goes on a financial tour through her husband's trousers.

EXPERIENCE is unnecessary. Any girl can get her start at the altar.

THE only things she needs is a marriage license and the address of a good lawyer.

THE field is practically unlimited, although "Peaches" Browning is working the East and Lita Chaplin is covering the West.

IT'S a wonder the government doesn't indict them under the Sherman Anti-Trust law.

FROM the money they're asking, you'd think they were trying to monopolize the alimony business.

HOWEVER they only control California and New York. There is still plenty of territory open in the middle west.

THE way Mrs. Chaplin has been helping herself you'd think Charlie kept his dough in a cafeteria.

SHE wants all the money he's got and fifteen dollars more.

IT looks as though her idea of Heaven is ten poorhouses with Charlie broke in every one of them.

SHE found his bank account and sewed it up so tight that he's had to hire nine lawyers to take the stitches out.

IT isn't so much the money, it's the principle; and four thousand dollars a month is a lot of principal.

A FEW years ago Chaplin stopped some man from imitating him. He probably wishes this fellow was in his shoes now.

INSTEAD of hurting Charlie, this suit should give him prestige. It isn't every man who can pay that much alimony.

THEY have a community property law in California. Whatever belongs to a wife is hers, and whatever belongs to her husband is hers too.

WITH the divorce courts giving out these large sums every afternoon women are foolish to stay happily married.

THE SAYINGS OF MRS. SOLOMON

By HELEN ROWLAND

WHAT hath become of thee, oh my lost love?

For, lo, though I seek thee in the old places, nowhere can I find thee!

Behold, once wert thou my right hand and my defense, my succor in times of need, and my solace in times of trouble!

Yea, more faithfully than a "tame cat" didst thou perform all those little acts of service so touching to the heart of woman!

It was thou who opened the refractory drawer when it stuck; and thou who unfastened the locked door, when the key was lost.

Thou wert always at hand to aid me in extracting a cork from a bottle, and in cutting the leaves of a book.

It was thou who gallantly fastened my shoes and made the opening of my morning's mail a pleasure rather than a task.

When my husband's pipe needed cleaning, it was thee to whom I looked for first aid. Thou wert always near to fasten the wheel upon the baby's broken toy and to dig the stubborn top out of the mucilage pot.

Lo, I have observed thee at a picnic, when thou didst serve in more capacities than a butler and a retinue of maids.

In all these little ways thou wert closer than a brother and more helpful than a soul mate!

Yet whilst thou wert ever with me, I held thee lightly.

Yea, while my locks were long and flowing, thou wert but a common household utensil, even as a carpet sweeper or a last year's husband!

But now that I have lost thee, behold, a thousand times a day do I miss thee and long for thee!

Now that my locks are BOBBED do I remember thee with gratitude, and think of thee with fondness and regret.

For thou wert, at once, a woman's servant and her weapon, her adornment, her comfort and her defense—oh, little HAIRPIN!

Little HAIRPIN of gold and silver and tortoise shell, how thou didst delight my vanity and adorn my crown of glory!

Little HAIRPIN of bronze and of wire, how do I MISS thee! Farewell, oh lost symbol of woman's charm and emblem of her ingenuity! Thou art the last relic of the age of chivalry and sentiment to disappear! Greatly shalt thou be mourned!

SELAH.

Chicago Needs Press Agent; Will Ford Be Outdistanced?

By B. C. Forbes

CHICAGO, Feb. 5.—Chicago is a unique mixture of conspicuous virtues and conspicuous vices. It is notorious these days for its murders; it is equally noted—or should be—for its millionaire philanthropists. Its bootlegging activities are more advertised to the world than its new civic improvements; yet the latter are much more notable than the former. Chicago "gangs" are infamous; but the outside world hears little of Chicago's fostering of art by its museums and schools, or the city's praiseworthy achievements in the realm of grand opera and other forms of music.

B. C. Forbes

The press of other cities are fond of picturing for us Chicago's slums, but how often do they tell us anything of the larger creation of parks now being energetically pushed forward? Political rottenness is loudly charged against Chicago—perhaps justly; but much less loudly is the world told of the noble things wealthy Chicagoans have done and are doing for the advancement and betterment of the city. Chicago needs a press agent!

Not a press agent to fool the outside world, but to see to it that Chicago gets fair play in the public prints of the country. One side of the city is constantly paraded. The press agent's job would be to draw attention—pleasingly, compellingly—to the other side. In theatrical parlance, Chicago chronically gets "a bad press." To remedy this nothing should be left undone.

That, at least, is how it strikes an outsider.

MOTOR manufacturers express satisfaction with the results of Chicago's Automobile Show. The keynote of the industry is confidence that a reasonably satisfactory—but not a record-breaking—year will be experienced.

Addressing a large gathering of Oakland-Pontiac dealers, I ventured these predictions: That competition this year will be fiercer than ever before; that some of the weakest concerns—mere assemblers—will go to the wall; that some others will seek shelter under the wing of stronger companies; that the best of the bigger companies will become bigger still.

There will be lots of orders in the market, but to bag them the bushes will have to be beaten most strenuously. We face a buyer's, not a seller's, year in almost every line of industry.

Moral: Hustle.

THE STATEMENT made on the witness stand at Washington by John W. Prentiss, prominent New York investment banker, that Ford recently had been offered a billion dollars in cold cash for his business aroused keen interest and piquant comments in motordom.

"He should take it. He may not get as good an offer again," was one large verdict.

All sorts of reports are afloat concerning a slump in Ford's sales and bookings. One prediction is that another low-priced car will this year equal Ford's total dollars-and-cents sales.

Rumor credits Ford with plans for taking over a rather large concern making a car in the thousand-dollar-or-less field. Apparently all Ford's competitors are convinced he must "do something."

However, there would seem to be little occasion for shedding many tears just yet over the plight of a man owning a business worth a thousand millions of good cash.

NEW BEDFORD MILL LOSSES ARE LARGE

Among New England mill centres, New Bedford was last to feel the adverse effects of recent textile troubles. Many of its yarn mills suffered a loss of business, but until 1926 its important fine goods mills, favored by style, for the most part kept their heads well above water. Last year, however, was not a profitable one. Within the past few days more than a half-dozen important New Bedford mills have issued their annual balance sheets, and in most cases these showed losses considerably larger than had been anticipated.
